

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An endocervical curettings receiver is provided for facilitate the collection of substantially all of the tissue samples taken during a endocervical curetting procedure. This allows all of the tissue samples taken to be analysed. The endocervical curettings receiver has 5 a handle to which is connected a collector have a truncated, spoon shaped appearance, and having smooth edges around the circumference of the collector. An improved device and method for the collection of substantially all of the tissue samples taken is provide.